I'VE TRIED DRAWING HOW MY SENPS MUST HAVE LOOKED DURING THE LAST SPURT A FEW DAYS AGO.

SO THIS IS HOW IT LOOKED IN YOUR EYES, KANDA-SAN.

Um... Hello! My name is Tamaki and I'm drawing pictures in the SNS club

We thought we should raise awareness of the SNS club's daily activities and such, so we started something called, I think, a "staff blog"!

Blog... I've heard this word on TV before, it feels kinda "IT".

I want to get more familiar with drawing in an "IT" way, too!

Hi.

By the way, we're planning to get together on Sunday for a wrap-up party, I've sent you a message

I've replied to you
Looking forward to it!

Congratulations on opening the website!

By the way, I'm not a club member, so how come I still get an introduction page here?

Welcome!

You told me that you'd help me if I also helped you, Tamaki, so at the point you're almost a club member so I thought I'd be okay to introduce you here as well!

Nice to meet you, I'm the president of Some Dead Fish Eyes, Not Enough Sunlight, Shuttle Run Club, or SNS club for short, Muna.

We've started this staff blog, but with these kinds of things, if you jump in, boasting like "now let's write to my heart's content!", it's never going to last long. In that sense it's like a summer holiday picture diary.

So there are no strict rotation rules or anything, we're aiming for a blog where we can take it easy with updates.

The photo above is when we stayed in the room of one of our club members a short while ago. Summer will be in full force soon, so to everyone who's reading this, please take care of your health to avoid catching a cold.

Well then, until next time

You're really taking this too seriously.

The kind of stuff is important in the early stages.

This is Ingi! These days I'm mainly responsible for scenarios here at the SNS club, I guess? I thought I'd take the chance to write something, but as I started it felt kinda nostalgic lol It's just, I ran something slightly resembling a blog once (not anymore though!)

So this and that happened! and our second work materialized without mishap! This is a photo taken a few days ago during the fair. This is our illustrator, Ms. Tamako (the photo didn't come out too well!). Drawing a sketch on the spot for someone sounds tough, but as a writer I don't get to do anything like that, so I admire it.

Right, speaking of drawings! I've practiced drawing pixel art together with Ms. Tamako a short while ago. Ms. Tamako is really quick on the uptake, I suppose? She made cute pixel art out of a stuffed doll we had in the room.

"But I won't lose to her!", I thought, and made a picture out of the photo above!

I think I did better than last time, what do you think?

A flowing light, a melting word

A budding hydroponic in a mass of dancing sounds

Though it will overflow from a single drop

Why isn't it coming out of me anymore?

Full me, why, why?

A blue bud opened into a flower

And I become the beast who plucks it

This happens often in everyday life

You'll say and laugh- isn't that?

Just a bit more, a bit more; I say

Filled with concrete

Grey hands, grown out hair

With a stone roll side

It from this rubble

I can get over a single foot

Why don't I give it to that flower
